

Can individuals sell outdoor power supplies in Ireland

Sells EEE or batteries via distance communication to consumers and businesses in Ireland where the company is based outside Ireland. "Distributor" means any natural or legal person in the supply chain, ...

Any person may now carry out the retail supply of electricity in Ireland so long as they first obtain a licence from the CRU to supply electricity and accede to participation as a supplier in the SEM, which ...

If your business sells services to private consumers in Ireland and the EU, the place of supply is (generally) the place where the supplier is established. There are many exceptions to this ...

Where a sales contract is concluded between a trader and consumer, the trader must ensure that he has the right to sell the goods when ownership of the goods is to be transferred under the contract. If ...

Every garden room in Ireland needs a properly installed, compliant power supply. There are only a few ways this is done correctly -- and which one applies depends on your house, your garden layout, ...

This page explains when non-established traders are required to register for Value-Added Tax (VAT) in Ireland

As a business selling to consumers, there are a number of laws you have to follow. To help you, we have put together a guide to your main obligations when you sell goods, services and digital ...

This page provides compliance guidance and information for distance sellers of electrical and electronic equipment and batteries such as what is a distance seller and what are their legal obligations.

Consumers buying from businesses based in Ireland or the EU have strong consumer rights. These rights are part of the Consumer Rights Act 2022 and apply to products you sell on or after 29 ...

The Competition and Consumer Protection Commission (CCPC) has a consumer helpline and website that gives consumers information on their rights. If the business is registered in another EU country, ...

Can individuals sell outdoor power supplies in Ireland

Web: <https://falconengineering.co.za>

